

National Art Gallery goes green

ANS working with GE to bring one of art's masterpieces to life in Trafalgar Square

This wall has been designed to bring a masterpiece to life. One of Van Gogh's famous paintings, A Wheatfield, was depicted in plants.

The true painting can be seen in Room 45 of the National Gallery. 640 modules were grown, using over 8000 plants of varying species. The artwork was created by hand-planting each plant into the modules, using a numbered drawing.

The modules were grown at ANS' southern nursery in Aldingbourne, hung vertically to establish and then dispatched.

Due to the very tight deadline on the project, the whole installation took three days to complete. Maintenance will be carried out fortnightly throughout the Spring and Summer, including health checks, pruning and general plant husbandry.

A flight of fancy

ANS install their 1st wall at Gatwick airport!

A living wall was installed in the new Number 1 Traveller's lounge in North Terminal at Gatwick Airport.

ANS are currently working on a design for a living wall within Heathrow Airport, shortly to be installed.

See it for real - visit The National Art Gallery in Trafalgar Square or our website.

enquiries@ansgroupeurope.com

ansurbanruralism

www.livingwallsgreenroofs.co.uk

